Background/Working group method

This study of a mock arbitration case aims to meet the practical needs of those involved in international trade and investment and will simulate an ICC arbitration proceeding, highlighting differences in cultures and legal practices and giving valuable insight views into the do's and don'ts of international arbitration practice.

Every truly international arbitration practitioner and corporate counsel involved in or considering the use of arbitration is well advised to acquaint himself/herself with the ICC Rules of Arbitration 2012 and their practical, hands-on application.

While maintaining the traditional advantages of ICC arbitration, the new 2012 ICC Arbitration Rules brought about considerable changes and innovations to the ICC's arbitral proceedings in particular regard-ing multiparty scenarios, the initiation phase & the ability to obtain interim measures of relief from an emergency arbitrator even before the Arbitral Tribunal is constituted. Increased efficiency, reduction of cost, enhanced protection of fundamental procedural rights, & the electronic handling of arbitration are key issues in focus.

The working group method:

- Study of a mock case within small working groups
- The mock case will be sent to participants before the training so that they can read the facts, prepare for the working in groups and identify the contractual clauses which cover the events mentioned in the facts
- Technical and practical presentations with international arbitration practitioners.

There will be opportunities to debate amongst participants and speakers during interactive plenary sessions
